BURCLARS AT LEWISHAM.
OUTRAGE BY MASKED MEN.
INTERVIEW WITH THE VICTIM.
Lewisham is beginning to attain quite an evil reputation for crimes committed in and around it. Scarce had the terrible murder of a woman there a few weeks ago time to die out of the public memory when another diabolical outrage arises to take its place and supply fresh wares for gossip mongers. On the present occasion the crime took the form of an attempted burglary, accompanied by a murderous attack upon the proprietor of the house. The shop selected was that of Mr. Evans, who for the past to prove the past of the safe or beginning in bed, his head eveloped in surgicial lying in bed, his head eveloped in surgicial week through extensive loss of blood, related in a whisper to a "People" reported the painful marrative of the murderous attack upon his goed mother and himself. Let it first be stated that Mr. Evans, sia in the prime of manhood, and resides at his business premises with his widowed mother.

CIGARETTE PAPERS.

The Chimes of Antwerp.
So the weather being fine, one night last week I walked over from Harw.ch to Farkeston, took the steamer to Antwerp, and once more heard the inharmonious jangle of the cathedral chimes. First and foremost, they almonious jangle of the cathedral chimes. First and foremost, they almost the state of the cathedral chimes. First and foremost, they almost you became acquainted with Motley's tragic story of the massacres through which they murmured their "Shadow Dance" in the sunny air that baited not one jot of its raciance for the cruel murders that will for ever blacken the character of Philip of Spain. What pathetic untuned music they make, these bells of Antwerp! They have reminiscences of a

If it had not been for Browning's version of the story of the piper and the gats, who would have cared about the High-street of Hamelin? Tradition outlives history, and poetry outlives both. Browning's verses will outlive both. Browning's verses will outlive the tremendous reality of the Hanseatic League. But for Longfellow's 'Wreck of the Hesperus,' vere despite its suggestive name, who would linger by the 'Reef of Norman's Woe' with any deeper feelings than those which any rock-bound coast awakens? Othello is of more enduring fame than the most historic Doge of Venice. Who would ever talk of Edmonton outside the metropois but for 'John Gilpin?' Beyond the farthest sees Yerona lives in the fabled story of Remeso and Juliet. There never was a

Among the subjects is a rough sketch, done for illustrating the new process, which is to be treated as a sketch for a greater work. He calls it "A Rift in the Cloud." It represents the Saviour crucified between the two thieves, but instead of a light figure, as is common, against a dark sky, it will be a dark figure backed by a great ray of light descending from heaven, a poetic and impressive fancy, which should develop into a fine work.

In view of the intention of several companies on the Rand to shut down their mines, a measure which would have the effect of throwing a large number of men out of work. President Rruger has issued a proclamation. There are grounds to suspect, he says, that the action contemplated is prompted by the asme spirit as that which provoked the late and the same spirit as that which provoked the late as the same spirit as that which provoked the late to promise the supply of nativelabour, and otherwise to facilitate the development of the mining industry he warms those who may endeavour to entrammel that development hatthey will be dealt with with the utmost ricour. ANOTHER COUP ANTICIPATED.

The proclamation of President Kruger (says a later telegram) has not altered the position of affairs for the better. The promise that the Government would facilitate the obtaining of native labour, and thus prevent the shutting down of the mines which it was rumoured was about to take place owing to the searcity of miners, was well econceived, but has not had the desired effect. On the contrary, business continues practiowing to the scarcity of miners, was well conceived, but has not had the desired effect. On the contrary, business continues practically at a standstill. People all seem expecting some further coup, and are on the look out for it. In the best quarters such fears are declared to be imaginary, but they are, nevertheless, strongly entertained. A further search for arms and ammunition at the Robinson Mine has proved to be fruitless. Gen. Joubert rode through the main streets amounted standard-bearer carrying the Transval flag. The Chamber of Mines has cirulated their seventh annual report. It states that the increase in the output has fallen off, owing to bad weather, the defective abour supply, and political disturbances, but denies the report that the mines are to be shut down. The native supply of labour is worse than ever, but despite the depressing conditions the market is fairly good.

LORD SALISBURY AND ARMENIA. Lord Saliabury and a number of his collagues in the Government were this week entertained at dinner in the Whitehall Rooms, by the Nonconformist U. Association. Sir G. H. Chubb presided. Responding to the teast of Her Majesty's Minister. Lord Saliabury acknowledged the obligations the Conservative party were under to his hosts and their supporters in the battle they had waged against Home Rule. As to the relations which the Transvasi bore towards England, he regarded them as an extreme case of Home Rule, and he contended that recent events in that country threw a lurid light on what might have happened in Ireland if Ireland's demands had been conceded. Turning to the controversy with the United States, the Prime Minister asserted that his despatches advocated the Monroe doctrine as President Monroe understood it. Whilst he admitted the horrors that had been perpetrated in Armenia, he submitted that England alone could not mitigate the evil. If she did not co-operate with the great Powers she must act against them, and thus produce calamitate these armore awful than the most terrible tale alroady told.

ST. PANCRAS AND BRIXTON.

Bye-elections have just taken place in two typical metropolitan constituencies of North ward of South London. In each case the conditions were pretty much the same, and in both cases the results of the conflict have been very similar. At the general election both South St. Pancras and Brixton went to swell the volume of the flowing tide of Unionist victory. But since that event-Sir Julian Goldsmid has died, and the Marquis of Carmathan has succeeded his father as of Carmathan has succeeded his father as of Carmathan has succeeded his father as the succeeded his father as LC.C. FLECTION. Julian Goldsmid has died, and the Marquis of Carmathan has succeeded his father as Duke of Leeds. Both members had enormous majorities—the sort of majorities that make a prudent electioneering agent anxious lest over-confidence should keep apathetic electors away from the poll next time the enemy contests the seat. That, indeed, was the first danger in both these constituences. Furthermore, in South St. Pancras the personal popularity f Sir Julian Goldsmid, and the confidence of the electors in his long political experience, could not, reasonably, political experience, could not, reasonably political experience, could not, reasonably for the political experience, and the propertical experience of the political experience, and the propertical experience of the political experience of the politica be expected to be transferred bodily to Mr. 6,092; Cohen, 6,035; Clarke, 5,922; Norfolk. Jessel, a young man, and an untried politician. Then, the natural desire of the Conservatives for a candidate of their own rather than a Laberal Unionist was another possible cause of abstentions. Lastly, the Radical candidate, Mr. Harris, had already felt the pulse of the constituency, and was known to be capable of making a good fight. In spite, however, of all fears, Mr. Jessel considerable by the constituency, and was known to be capable of making a good fight. In spite, however, of all fears, Mr. Jessel considerable by the constituency and the previous majority. In more remarkable; and the two events, taken together, may be assumed to indica e pretty accurately the state of political opinion in the kingdom. The importance of this double course, the constituency and the first of the constituency and the constituency and the first of the constituency and the first of the constituency and the constituency and the first of the constituency and the first of the constituency and the constituency when the hands of the Government need all the strengthening they can get, it is highly satisfactory to note that factious opposition is conspicuous by its absence. Unionists have stood shoulder to shoulder, and with them, we rejoice to say, not a few Radicals, putting particisism above party, have supported the Ministerial candidates at the polls. Indeed, as one surveys the conduct of both political parties during the recent crisis, one is struck by the remarkable exhibition of patrionic unanimity which they have afforded. Unionists and Radicals have forgotten, for the nonce, their domestic differences, and have only remembered that they are Englishmen. Probably, however, it is not unfair to surmise that the stronger a Government is that more likely it is to obtain that patrionic adhesion upon which we have congratulated the Radicals. If Ministers were not well backed by their own followers they would accept get much assistance from the Opposition. From that tanth one gathers the special importance of these two Parliamentary elections. They go to prove that Lord Salisbury and his colleagues command the special importance of the government and the surface of the large majority of the electorate just as fully to-day as they did six months ago. The demonstration of that have cannot fail to deal yet another blow to the hopes of any opponents of the Government who might otherwise be tempted to indulge in factious opposition. We are living just influence in the surface of the large majority of the electorist patrionic fail to deal yet another blow to the word might otherwise be tempted to indulge in factious opposition. We are living just influence and influitely less important than the momentous influence and influitely less important than the momentous who might offset whe to the are living just now in a time when mere party politics are infinitely less important than the momentous issues upon which depend the very existence of the British Empire.
